KING EDWARD has at last been crowned and the whole country breathes easier. It took place at noon don, before a brilliant assemblage of return to Buckingham Palace, where, on June 25, he lay at death's door, it was officially announced that he had stood well the day's ordeal. No acci- other case of the fatal number, 13. dent marred the processions or the ceremonies in the Abbey. An incident approaching the sensational occurred when the venerable Archbishop of Canterbury attempted to place the crown on the King's head. Overcome by nervousness and suffering from impaired eyesight, he started to place the emblem backward. An instant later he swooned and would have fallen had not Edward himself grabbed him by the sailes, is dead. arm. W. T. Stead, the London editor, in describing the coronation, cites as its most interesting feature the homage the Danville fair. to the Galilean paid by the King and Queen in bowing in prayer amid scenes of such splendor and grandeur.

DEMOCRATIC control of the National House of Representatives seems to be assured if never failing signs are to be reckoned with. It is only necessary to change 23 districts to succeed in mak" ing a democratic majority. The membership of the next house will be increased from 357 to 370. Of this increase Northern States get 19, while the Southern States get 10. There are many things to make the democrats hopeful. The beet-sugar quarrel in Michigan, the certain gain of a Congressman in Pennsylvania, the factional fight in the East St. Louis district, a gain in North Carolina, a gain of two in Kentucky, all these things portend a rout of the republicans from the control of the House.

"A VERY strong pressure will be brought to bear on the Hon. John D. White to induce him to enter the race for Congress against Judge Vincent Boreing. White is now located in Louisville, but claims Manchester, Clay county, as his home," says a dispatch from Middlesboro. Mr. man, has had lots of experience in the tion City, and is highly regarded as a journalistic field and we predict that business man. the Democrat will be improved by his work on it. THERE are six candidates for the office of United States Senator from South Carolina in place of James L. McLaurin, whose term expires March entire winter. 4, 1903. It is hoped with such a field to pick from, better choice will be made than by recent Legislatures in the Palmetto State.

As soon as Mr. W. P. Walton gets his paper, the Lexington Democrat, to running smoothly he will begin a vigorous campaign for the nomination for railroad commissioner. He has pledges of support from many portions of his district and with the big county of Fayette solidly at his back he is bound to be a formidable candidate. His chances for the nomination grow brighter as the days go by and if he doesn't succeed the present incumbent, C. C. McChord, his friends will be both surprised and disappointed. Having heartily supported the democratic party for 30 or 40 years and having never asked for recognition from that party, it is but just and right now that he now be given what he wants. An experienced railroad man and fair and honorable in all of his dealings, the railroads could not object to him, while the people could rest assured that their interests would never be neglected while he was a member of the railroad commission. Vote for him.

Sickness steals more savings than the burglar. Slowly, coin by coin, the money that has been so hardly earned is paid out for drugs and doctors. Sickness is the worst enemy of the working man, and the common cause of the working man's sickness is disease of the stomach often involving the heart, lungs,

Old Table Rules.

John Russell, a gentleman some time member of the household of Humphrey Duke of Gloster, was perhaps one of the first to give in his "Book of Nature" (1401) instructions as to the layng of tables.

The cloths were to be creaseless, not with the appearance of having been lain upon; knives were not to be wiped on the cloth. Apparently there were scanty articles of practical use for the guests at that time, but etiquette and elaborate rules came in on the subject | Lord called her home. She was a conof carving and serving various pleces, which it was seemly to choose for this or that guest. The "upper crust of the Tennyson's Vanity.

Charles Stewart, a British lawyer, published a volume of reminiscences and in it tells two stories about Tennyson, whom he found self conscious and accessible to flattery.

"A little niece of mine," he relates, "was one day standing beside his chair. He lifted her up and placed her on his knee for half a minute, and then he put her down, saying, 'Now you can Tickets good returning until Aug. 18th. say you have sat on Tennyson's Ask ticket agents for particulars. W. say you have sat on Tennyson's knee."

On another occasion Tennyson was Jowett's guest at the Master's Lodge, Baliol, with a few other men, and aftearly to his room. Next morning at breakfast Tennyson was in a silent mood, but as the men were rising from the table he said: "Jowett, after I left you last night I wrote a few verses. I am not sure that I have ever done anything better. I will read them to you." Jowett, preparing to go off for his day's work, replied hastily: "Oh, no; thank you, Tennyson. I've no time for that sort of thing just now. I am very

Sunday Ethics.

As grown up folks are divided on the question of what is proper and what is not proper to do on the Sabbath, perhaps two little girls, neighbors in West Eighty-second street, may be forgiven for a mild dispute overheard one recent Sunday afternoon. Both little maids were freshly dressed and were evidently out upon the steps for a breath of air after their dinners. The younger one, full of the joy of living, was working off some of her youthful spirit by walking up one side of the stone steps and down the other.

"Oh, you oughtn't to do that on Sunday. It isn't right, and your mamma won't like it. That's what they call breaking the Sabbath," said the older one, about twelve years old. She was standing still and looking very reproachfully at her companion

"Well, I don't care. What's a girl to do outdoors Sunday?" petulantly asked the little girl.

Treatment of Face Moles.

A hairy mole which is still growing should be removed at once, even at the risk of some injury to the skin. It is now probably no more than a plexus of capillary vessels, with only a small supply of connective tissue. There is also a likelihood that it has not yet involved the skin. If this be its condition, the skin over the tumor may be reflected in flaps, and the tumor itself strangulated with ligature in one of the usual ways. The flaps should then be replaced, and the result will be a minimum of cicatrix and deformity.

But if the nævus be allowed to grow it will become a large, highly vascular erectile tumor, probably invading and involving the skin, liable to profuse hemorrhage if injured, yet still quite amenable to treatment, though of a less simple kind. The modes of treating nævi are numerous and are contin-

IN MEMORIAM.

A loving wife and a good mother gone home. Died near Crab Orchard nine years ago and was baptized by Elder K. D. Noakes, after which she united with the Christian church and affectionate husband and loving, faithful daughters and one dear little boy to her gain in the sweet bye and bye. Her body was laid to rest July 28, 1902, at Ephesus church after funeral discourse by Elder K. D. May God bless the sorrowing and heart-broken ones and may His grace sustain them in this sad hour of sorrow and bereavement is the prayer of the writer.

The family wishes to extend their thanks to all the neighbors and friends that were so kind and good to us, both day and night all through our distress. A FRIEND.
